

Jennifer M. Schott, AFC® The Number Cruncher

Jen loves numbers – and always has. But she understands that talking about money can sometimes be emotional. By helping you put numbers down on paper, Jen helps you balance out your emotional response with solid number-crunching to ensure you make the best overall financial decisions for yourself.

About Jen:

Jen has nearly 20 years of experience in higher education including 13 years in the financial education space and additional experience in financial aid and student services on college campuses. She is the ultimate student advocate.

M.A. Higher Education Administration, Boston College
B.A. Mathematics and Economics, Lafayette College
Accredited Financial Counselor (AFC®)

Jen's Financial Tip:

Grab a partner! Sometimes it's hard to change your financial habits, so enlist the help of an accountability partner. Look for someone who is supportive and can help you navigate temptations and maintain your motivation. This person will pick you up when you've veered off course and celebrate you once you've achieved your goal.
